The Financialization of Foreign Policy: Targeted Financial Sanctions, Vulnerability, and Government Retaliation

This project identifies the conditions under which governments retaliate in response to the imposition of targeted financial sanctions by the United States. It introduces the Targeted Financial Sanctions Dataset, a comprehensive dataset of targeted financial sanctions imposed between 2011 and 2019. The project employs a multimethod research design, using quantitative analyses of the dataset and detailed case examples of sanction episodes imposed in Venezuela and Russia to test hypotheses.
